IBJ: The Current Situation in Eastern Europe

Per our 16 August telephone conversation, attached for your information is the note on "Unease in Eastern Europe" which I gave the Secretary when I saw him earlier that day. It responds to some questions he raised at our previous session and in handing it to him I made it clear that this was not a coordinated Community paper though to the best of my knowledge our colleagues elsewhere in the Community would probably be in general accord with the comments contained in it.

MEMORANDUM

SUBJECT: Unease in Eastern Europe

Moscow's policy of demanding that detente with the West be accompanied by increased discipline and unity in Eastern Europe is causing growing unease and could lead to trouble. There are signs that the policy has caused at least some problems for every regime in the area. The potential for trouble, however, seems greatest in the Balkans with Romania, Hungary and Yugoslavia the most likely hot-spots. The situation in Poland, and to a somewhat lesser extent, that in Czechoslovakia, will also bear close watching, and we can expect to see some push and tug in the councils of the Warsaw Pact and CEMA.
